Re: United States v. Brian Patrick Regan Verdict

Today's verdict is an important victory for the American people, especially our brave men and women in military service. It comes at an important moment in American history when our need to safeguard military secrets has never been more critical.

This conviction demonstrates that traitors can and will be held accountable. Mr. Regan betrayed his country and the men and women in uniform with whom he served. He put his love of money before his love of country.

I congratulate and commend the outstanding prosecutors in this case for their skill and devotion to duty. The trial team of Patricia Haynes, James P. Gillis and Steve Doyle, with special support from Lynn Johnson, performed an outstanding public service.

I also want to thank the FBI's Washington Field Office, particularly Special Agent Steve Carr, for its dedication and tireless efforts in this case. My appreciation also goes to the Department of Defense, including the fine men and women in the National Reconnaissance Office.
